Tracing Missing Paper. John W. Wooten was placed on trial yesterday in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, charged with grand larceny in the alleged conversion of a check for $1,000 given him by David Rothschild. Mr. Rand charged that Rothschild had given Wooten a check for $1,000 with which to pay the premium on a bond of $400,000, which the Bankers' Surety Company had issued to Rothschild as temporary administrator of the Weissel estate, and that Wooten had cashed the check at the Federal Bank and converted the money to his own use. "It is a fact that Rothschild is a convict, and is now in States prison," said Mr. Rand; "but a convict can be stolen from just as well as an This is not a proceeding to recover the $1,000 for Rothschild, but it is a proceeding to punish the defendant for theft."

The first witness called was Abraham Finkelstein, of the Surrogates' office, who produced the certificate of appointment of Rothschild as temporary administrator of the Weissel estate, and also the bond issued by the Bankers' Surety Company.

Benjamin F. Caston, manager of the Federal Bank under Rothschild, testified that on October 27, 1904, he heard Wooten tell Rothschild that the Bankers' Surety Company was going to get off his bond for the position of temporary inistrator of the Weissel estate unless he paid $1,000 more on the premium. As a result of this talk, he said, Rothschild told him to get a check of the Federal Bank's cashier for $1,000. He said he got this check, gave it to Rothschild, and saw Rothschild give it to Wooten.

In cross-examination Caston said that, though he was manager of the bank at a salary of $6,-000 a year, he had had no previous banking experience. He was credit man for a cloth house in St. Louis, when he obtained the position through answering an advertisement by Rothschild. Caston testified that neither Rothschild the bank's president, nor Vice-President Abercromble, as well as several others of its officers, had any salary.

He said he understood that the money was to be paid to Armitage Mathews, then secretary of the Bankers' Security Company, in this city. Other testimony was:

Q .- Did you visit Rothschild in Sing Sing? A. Q-Were you threatened with arrest? A.—No. Q-Where did you meet Rothschild after his conviction? A.—In the District Attorney's office. Q.—Was your salary partly paid by the Globe Security Company? A.—Yes; at the beginning of the Federal Bank's business, my salary checks came from the Globe Security Company. I don't know who sent them.

Miss Mary Ann Huckle, cashier of the Federal Bank, and now employed in the office of the receiver of that defunct institution, told of the drawing of the check, on October 27, 1904, concerning which Caston had testified. The check was drawn to Wooten's order, and taken by was drawn to Wooten's order, and taken by Caston to Rothschild, while later she drew another check for the same amount on Rothschild's account to offset the cashier's check.

The check given to Wooten was not produced in evidence, as it has not been discovered, but the stub of it in the cashier's book was produced, and Rothschild's personal check and the stub therefor, to offset the cashier's check, were offered and admitted in evidence.

At the afternoon session several witnesses were called by the prosecution to give evidence pertaining to the cashing of the check.

Frederick C. Trimble, the receiving teller of the People's Bank, and at the time of the alleged crime the paying teller of the Federal Bank, swore that he had cashed a check for a large amount, he could not remember what, for Wooten about October 27. He was a little hazy on the details. On the cross-examination he was asked if he did not know that Wooten was in Wilmington at the time of the alleged cashing of the check, doing business for Rothschild. He said he did not know it. Mary J. Kern, who was the assistant discount clerk of the Federal Bank, swore that she saw the check after it was paid.

The rest of the session was taken up trying

The rest of the session was taken up trying to find out what had become of the check itself, without success.

Testimony was given to try to show that the check was placed in a cabinet, and the purchaser of the cabinet at the sale of the fixtures was called, but he said he had not found the check.

NEW COMPLAINT IN HEINZE CASE.

Federal Courts Must Decide Validity of Claim to Valuable Lodes.

An amended complaint by the Johnston Mining Company against the Boston and Montana Consolidated Silver and Copper Mining Company was filed yesterday, in which the allegations of the taking of valuable over by the defendant company, estimated at $37,000,000, are repeated.

The question involved calls for a new construction by the Federal courts of the United States Mining laws. The lodes were originally conveyed by patent by the United States to Eugene Fournier and four others in June, 1884. They transferred them to Arthur P. Heinze in 1897, and the latter, a year later, deeded his rights to the Montana Ore Purchasing Company. The courts will be asked to pass on the validity of the patent to the original five owners.
